A CHRISTMAS SONG.

The oak is a siturg and stalwart Iron, And it lifts its brattches up.

And catches the dow right gallantly for many a daloty cup.

And the world is by ghier, and better toade,
Because of the worldman's atroke.

Descending in sun, or falling in shade,
On the stordy form of the oak.

Hot stronger, f weet, in apparel green.

And trapplings so lair to ose;
With its precious freight, for small and great,
Is the beautiful Curbstinas tree.

The elni is a kind and goodly tree,
With I shranches bending low;
The heart is glad when its form we see,
As we list to the river's flow.

Ay! the heart is glad, and the pulses bound,
And joy flumines the face,
Whenever a goodly elni is found,
Because of its beauty and grace.
Int kinder, I ween, more goodly in men,
With branches more drouging and free,
The tluts of whose leaves, fidelity weaves,
Is the beautiful Christmastree.

The name is suple, and lithe, and strong.
And (I imeth our love anew.
When the days are I siless, and quiet, and long, And the world is fair to view.
And laler,—as leavn we are graces unfold,—A unorarch right regally drest.
With streamers allame, and permons of gold, it seemeth of all the leat.
More lissome I ween, the brightness and sheen, And the coloring, sunny and free, And the namers soft, that are held aloft, By the heautiful Christmas tree—St. Nicholas.

The greatest feat in engineering since ie construction of the Suez canal was rought to a successful termination a ew days since in the completion of the North Sea canal. As early as 1819, when the fury of wind and river was filling with sand-banks the channel connecting the Znyder Zee with the North Sea, the merchants of Amsterdam foresaw that, to save their city from the desolation that has befallen the now dead cities of the Zuyder, they must open an outlet to then apply the Linimout, rub in well with the sea. A cut of but fifteen miles due! eastward would have connected them with tide-water. It is true, there would have been difficulty in establishing a seire harbor at the sea entrance there ont, as compared with the magnitude of the whole undertaking, that difficulty was inconsiderable. But, with that as conishing suppility that can be born only f provincial selfi-liness, the canal, which William 1., when the plans were submitted to him, declared should be cut on the route of that just opened, was run from Amsterdam to the Helder-the main entrance to the Zuyder Zee-fitt served its purpose—it took Amsterdam to the sea. But it takes two days for vessels by that route to reach the city from the Helder; the harbor there nuch of the time exceedingly difficult o umke, and the canal Itself is too shalow for navigation by the ships of this era It was those considerations that led t he projection of the present canal i
